"We are very proud to announce GFAS Accreditation status for Free Rein Foundation," said Traci Hanson, GFAS Program Director - Equine, "The team at Free Rein provides sanctuary for abused and unwanted horses. These horses are truly given the opportunity to heal and to help young people heal too."

Justine Makoff, President, Free Rein Foundation states, "We are deeply grateful to the Global Federation of Animal Sanctuaries for this accreditation. It not only acknowledges the important work we do at Free Rein Foundation but also substantiates what we have built over the past eleven years. As a volunteer-run organization, we are honored to receive this recognition and hope it inspires others to see our sanctuary as worthy of their philanthropic support. The accreditation process was both rigorous and enlightening, every aspect of our operation was reviewed. We can proudly say that Free Rein Foundation runs an outstanding sanctuary, providing the utmost care and respect for every animal in our charge."

The GFAS Equine Accreditation Program is made possible by a generous grant from The American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals® and the Kenneth Scott Charitable Trust.

About Free Rein Foundation

Founded in 2014, Free Rein Foundation is a nonprofit equine sanctuary located in Huntington Beach, California. Over the past 11 years, we have rescued more than 40 abused, neglected, or unwanted horses—some still live in our sanctuary herd—and successfully re-homed 14 into safe, loving environments.

Our mission is twofold: to provide a lifelong, loving sanctuary for horses in need and to harness their natural, intuitive healing abilities to support youth facing mental health challenges. Through equine-assisted programs, we have helped over 5,000 young people build confidence, emotional resilience, and a sense of connection.

At Free Rein Foundation, horses and humans heal together—restoring trust, fostering compassion, and creating a better future for both. To learn more about Free Rein Foundation, go to: <https://freereinfoundation.org/>
